

New York Jets 2010 Super Bowl Betting MVP Odds

Contributed by Dave Stone
Sunday, 24 January 2010
Last Updated Sunday, 24 January 2010

New York Jets 2010 Super Bowl Betting MVP Odds - Super Bowl Betting: Jets Confidence In AFC Championship. The New York Jets will be a road underdog for a third consecutive week and if they can pull off one more upset, they'll be heading to the Super Bowl.

Super Bowl Betting Odds New York Jets 4-1. The Jets are very confident heading into this game and their coach has already talked about expecting a win. Eric Mangini may have laid the foundation for this team and now they are finally putting it all together. With an excellent running game and an excellent defense, the Jets could have what it takes to pull off another stunner.

Yes, there are still four teams left in the annual NFL postseason tournament and yes, we still don't know who will be the AFC and NFC representatives in Super Bowl XLIV. But is that going to stop us from looking way down the road? Super Bowl MVP Betting Odds list Adrian Peterson (Vikings) 10-1 and Darrelle Revis (Jets) 7-1. Check out full list of 2010 Super Bowl MVP Odds at Sportsbook.com and Betus.com.